The Thirtieth Anniversary seems well and tuly over now. Whether it really was the great celebratory year we all hoped for is a matter of conjecture. Admittedly we got some repeats, some beautifully re-coloured video releases and a reasonably tolerable documentary (but one which would have been one hundred per cent better if The Late Show team had left director Kevin Davies' material intact). Then again we lost quite a lot – BBC Enterprises' much vaunted The Dark Dimension tribute adventure and however nice it was to see the Doctors all together, I'm not convinced that the Children in Need – Dimensions in Time pantomime (the official BBC description, not mine) was as good as it ought to have been. Nevertheless, the show has been put firmly back in the public's eye and surely that's no bad thing?

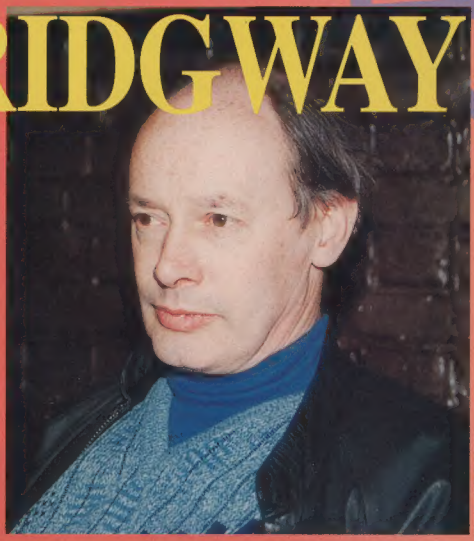
JOHN RIDGWAY



Plutu © John Freeman

One of the few artists to have successfully drawn all seven television Doctors, John Ridgway's contribution to the history of the Doctor Who comic strips is huge. He joined writer Steve Parkhouse in 1984 at the beginning of the strip adventures of the Sixth Doctor in Doctor Who Magazine. John's work included the creation of Frobisher the shape-shifting penguin and then overseeing the start of the Seventh Doctor's run. Recently he drew DWM's Thirtieth Anniversary Seven Doctors adventure Time and Time Again in his latest story, featuring the Seventh Doctor, Cuckoo is currently running in DWM Issues 208 to 210. Here John shares his memories of the strips with Doctor Who Classic Comics.

I had worked with Steve Parkhouse before Doctor Who, on Warrior Magazine, drawing two short stories, The Shroud, the Spire and the Stars and Home is the Sailor. I had also helped to ink Steve's serial The Spiral Path and I was to have taken over all the artwork on The Spiral Path from about Part Four but couldn't. This was because I was only a part-time artist back then, working full-time as an engineer and my company sent me out to Nigeria to commission equipment. The only thing I will say about Nigeria is that if you have an opportunity to go there – don't go!

For the first few instalments of my Doctor Who work I was still working only as a part-timer, drawing each evening from 7 to 10pm and practically all the weekends, as well as continuing my full-time job. As I had been working like that for the previous fifteen years or so, it was no extra strain. About that time I heard that I had work on a strip version of Enid Blyton's Famous Five, produced in Denmark by Guttenberghus (now Egmont, who own Fleetway Publications). I knew that the comic was not going to be released for twelve months so I had at least a year's work coming in and so this (together with Doctor Who) gave me the security I needed to become a full-time comic artist. Steve Parkhouse helped on Famous Five by inking the backgrounds to the first two books I drew.

When I drew my first Doctor Who, all I had were two rather fuzzy newspaper photographs of Colin Baker coming out of the TARDIS. It was impossible to get more than a vague likeness of Colin from the photographs and while I could see that the front of his coat had a tartan pattern I had no idea how elaborate the thing was. For my second instalment I had a number of close-up general publicity shots, but it wasn't until I saw Colin on television that I could start to get a feel for his height, mannerisms and general personality. This was the first time that I had attempted to draw likenesses so it was slow going for a while.

That first year was absolutely great! Steve tailor-made the stories to what he knew I would enjoy drawing. I cannot praise Steve too highly. He is a fine artist and the scripts he produced for me are the best scripts I have ever worked on. I am only sorry that since then our different schedules have prevented us from working together again.

Steve had by then been writing (and at one stage drawing) Doctor Who for about four years and was feeling exhausted. His scripts were sometimes reduced to very brief picture-by-picture instructions over the 'phone and I quite enjoyed this method as Steve made up the dialogue to suit my pictures, and when the magazine was published it was like reading something new. This way of working was an intermediate step between the traditional full script and the Marvel plot method, where the writer supplies a plotline which the artist draws and the writer goes back to actually dialogue. I must say that the Marvel method is the best way to draw comics because they are (obviously) a visual medium and this method allows the artist to get the best out of his own artistic strengths.

It was Steve who came up with the idea of Frobisher developing mono-morphia and getting stuck as a penguin. I think that early on he had realised that Frobisher's shape changing was too powerful an ability – at one stage he turned into a guard armed with a fully functional ray-gun! Another time he became a fly – I don't know what happened to his spare mass at that point – he must have been a very dense fly!

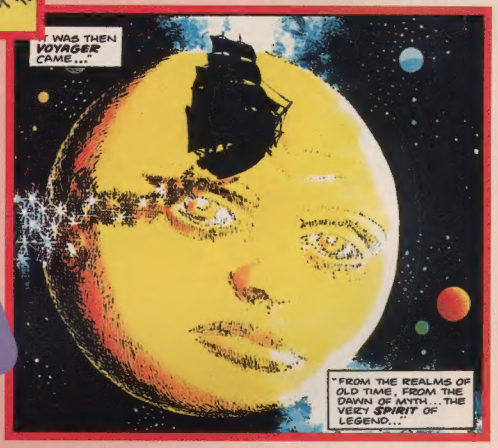
The story Once Upon A Time Lord wasn't just a tribute to Alfred Bestall's Rupert as was suggested in DWCC Issue 8, it also contained a tribute to Burne Hogarth's work on the syndicated Tarzan strip. The figure in a loin cloth swinging to Frobisher's rescue is my attempt at Hogarth's early Tarzan work, as are the backgrounds from that point on. The picture immediately following the Rupert sequence, as the Doctor and Frobisher jump back to reality, contains part of Hogarth's signature. I hope he doesn't mind the forgery! Steve's writing had a sense of fun and lightness which no other writer I have worked with could even approach. I had a great time adding visual jokes like the Prince Valiant emblem on the back of a chair and three penguins rampant on a shield. In the final picture of Once Upon A Time Lord, one of the characters was Cyril, the Editor Droid, a character Steve both wrote and drew for the weekly Star Wars comic, which I had recently taken over. Cyril recently appeared in Time and Time Again alongside the family of small penguins from the same panel. I was very sad when Steve left the strip. In that final episode, the words of Astrolabus are very much Steve speaking.

Alan McKenzie's stories were more in keeping with the television series. Whether that is good or bad depends on your point of view. Alan chose to ignore Frobisher's mono-morphia for War Game when he became a Conan-type. I can recall that in a later story the pages of one episode were completely shuffled – but no one appeared to notice! It may be noteworthy that the final episode credited to Alan (Genesis, reprinted in this edition of DWCC) was written by me. Sheila Cranna, who was DWM editor by then, had paid the BBC for use of the Cybermen and she was rather upset by the fact that the original script only contained half of one Cyberman. I eliminated a couple of coincidences that weakened the storyline, one of which was that after a prolonged period of drought an electrical storm suddenly appeared from nowhere and blew up the bad guy and the Cybermen. I also decided to re-use Steve's idea of mono-morphia to explain how Frobisher was kept a prisoner in a cell.



A succession of writers followed Alan and whilst they produced a wide variety of stories, there was none of Steve's continuity to build upon. As an artist, I usually get quite involved with the characters I draw – I have to, to be able to portray the necessary body language. I felt terrible drawing the strip when Peri was killed off in the television series; there I was drawing a beautiful young woman, full of the joys of life, believing she was going to come to a hideous end.

The last story I drew featuring Colin Baker as the Doctor was done while I was also drawing Hellblazer for DC Comics in America. To meet the deadlines I was helped on Doctor Who by Tim Perkins who was then a regular inker for Marvel UK and has since helped me a number of times on work for 2000AD and Marvel in the States. I felt very angered by the way Colin Baker was forced to leave the TV show – I had met him at a convention in Bath and I was impressed by his very obvious enthusiasm for the role. Colin had a tremendous potential that was only partially utilised by the series. I drew all the stories during the Colin Baker era so it is natural that I consider him to be "my Doctor".

Because of the nature of Colin's departure I was not impressed by Sylvester McCoy in the role – probably quite unfairly. Also Peri had left the strip and Frobisher was being written out. I was finding it difficult to draw both Doctor Who and Hellblazer and Sheila Cranna told me that because of falling ratings on the show and a corresponding fall in sales of DWM, she could not be certain how long the magazine would continue. I hated drawing Hellblazer – it contained next to no pictures which were interesting to draw. It had no beauty, nothing of nature and nothing but an everlasting succession of pictures that seemed to be little more than elaborate, time-consuming frames for dialogue. I had to grind my way through each issue knowing that the next one was waiting – what I called high-speed boredom! Even so, if DWM was to fail I had to keep on working so I reluctantly handed in my notice on the Who strip. I was annoyed to discover that the new editor of DWM immediately gave out six months work. If I had known that work was available and DWM was to continue after all, I would have stopped drawing Hellblazer. As it was, I found working on Hellblazer so unpleasant that I handed in my notice on that comic a few weeks later anyway.

Recently I have returned to the Who strip for odd stories which has been a lot of fun – Doctor Who was a point of change in my life and career at the beginning. A change that has proved to be very much for the good.

AN HOUR OR SO LATER, ABOARD THE TARDIS...
I KNEW IT. I JUST KNEW IT. I AM GOING TO NEED A PNEUMA-SPANNER...
LET ME GUESS WHAT HAPPENS NEXT...
FROBISHER... I DON'T SUPPOSE YOU COULD--GO AND FETCH THE PNEUMA-SPANNER?
YOU'RE A FINE CHAP, FROBISHER!
YEAH, YEAH. I KNOW. I'D JUST LIKE TO FIND OUT WHY IT'S ME, THE BRAINS OF THE TEAM, THAT HAS TO DO THE LIFTING AND CARRYING.
BRAINS? HAH! IF I HAD ANY BRAINS I'D BE BACK HOME PICKING UP TWENTY-FIVE A DAY PLUS EXPENSES AS A GUMSHOE...
ON THE OTHER HAND, IT COULD BE WORSE. AT LEAST I'M STILL ALIVE.
DID FROBISHER SAY SOMETHING?
YES, HE WAS TALKING ABOUT HIS THRILLING LIFE ...SAY, DO YOU HAVE SOMEWHERE I CAN STORE THESE OLD CLOTHES?
NOT NOW, PERI. I'M AWFULLY BUSY. SEE IF YOU CAN HURRY FROBISHER ALONG WITH THAT PNEUMA-SPANNER...
RATS! NO LIGHTS. ANYBODY GOT A MATCH?

WHASSAT?
SKURFLE!
SKFF!
SKFF!
ER, ANYBODY THERE?
HI! NEED A LIGHT?
GAH!
PERI! I ALMOST JUMPED OUT OF MY LITTLE WEBBED BOOTEES.
SORRY, FROBISHER— DIDN'T REALISE YOUR NERVES WERE SO BAD!
BRING THAT TORCH HERE AND LET'S SEE WHAT'S SCUFFLING IN THE DARK...
SCUFFLING? DON'T THINK IT COULD BE MICE, DO YOU?
MICE? GET SERIOUS. IT'S MORE LIKELY-- HUH?
SKURFLE!
SKUF!

OH GOODNESS!

GAH!

WHAT?

PEOPLE? IN MY TARDIS? WE'LL SEE ABOUT THIS.

RIGHT! WHAT'S THIS SPACESHIP DOING IN MY BOX-ROOM? WHO'S IN CHARGE HERE?

SLOW DOWN, DOCTOR. I THINK THESE PEOPLE ARE ONLY ABOUT NINETY-SEVEN CENTS TO THE DOLLAR. THE GENTLE TOUCH WILL WORK BETTER HERE.
COME ON, SPEAK UP. HOW DID YOU GET HERE?

I DON'T RIGHTLY KNOW. ONE MINUTE WE WAS LEAVING SYLVANIAR'S ATMOSPHERE, THE NEXT WE WAS IN THIS ROOM...
THIS IS A SHIP, AIN'T IT?

THE TARDIS IS MORE THAN JUST A SPACESHIP! IT'S — MERCY! WE MUST'VE BEEN TRAVELLING SO FAST, WE GONE CLEAN THROUGH THE SIDE OF YOUR... TARDIS WITHOUT MAKING A MARK. DIDN'T KNOW THAT WERE POSSIBLE.

"SO WE WENT TO ASK HELP OF THE SCIENTISTS AT THE CASTLE. A MAN IN SMART CLOTHES SAID THEY WERE TOO BUSY TRYING TO MAKE RAIN TO LOOK FOR SOME 'RUNAWAY PEASANTS'..."

ENOUGH! IT SEEMS TO ME THAT ALL I HAVE TO DO IS DEMATERIALISE THE TARDIS TO TURN YOU AND YOUR TRIBE LOOSE ON THE GALAXY ONCE MORE. SO IF YOU'LL KINDLY BOARD-- THAT DOES IT!

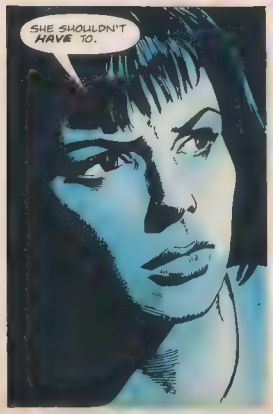
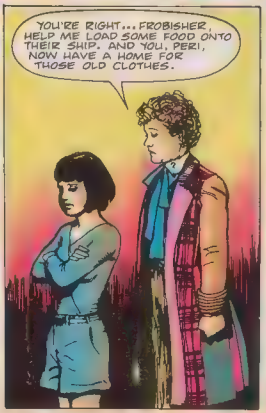
YOU KNOW, DOCTOR, I THOUGHT YOU HAD MORE CHARACTER THAN YOU SHOW. I WAS WRONG. YOU'RE A REAL COLD FISH.

I'VE HEARD YOU MAKE SPEECHES ABOUT NEVER TAKING AN INTELLIGENT LIFE AND MAKING THE GALAXY A SAFE DEMOCRACY. OKAY, LET'S SEE SOME OF THAT COMPASSION...

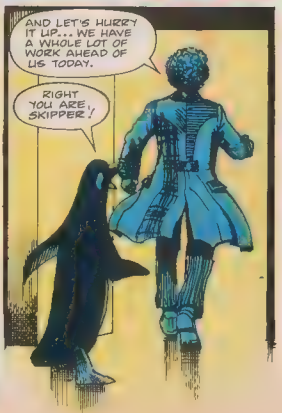
FOR HEAVEN'S SAKE, YOU DIDN'T EVEN OFFER THEM FOOD...
SHE DIDN'T ASK FOR FOOD!



SHE SHOULDN'T HAVE TO.



YOU'RE RIGHT... FROBISHER, HELP ME LOAD SOME FOOD ONTO THEIR SHIP. AND YOU, PERI, NOW HAVE A HOME FOR THOSE OLD CLOTHES.



AND LET'S HURRY IT UP... WE HAVE A WHOLE LOT OF WORK AHEAD OF US TODAY.
RIGHT YOU ARE, SKIPPER!

IS THAT THE LOT?
YUP!
BLESS YOU, MISS, FOR YOUR KINDNESS.
BEANS
!! NESS!
THE DOCTOR'S GOT GOOD HEARTS, REALLY. HE JUST GETS TETCHY WHEN HE'S BEEN WORKING HARD.

WE THOUGHT YUH WAS A WRONG 'UN THERE FOR A MOMENT, DOC. BUT YUH CAME THROUGH. YUR FOR THE PEOPLE AND I LIKE THAT.

IT WORKED! THEY'RE ON THEIR WAY. HOW DID YOU FIGURE IT OUT?
OH, EASY, REALLY. THE ONLY WAY THEY COULD HAVE GOT THAT SHIP IN HERE WAS IF WE MATERIALISED AROUND IT. ERGO, DEMATERIALISE AND WE MIGHT LEAVE THE SHIP WHERE WE FOUND IT. A LONG SHOT, BUT IT WORKED.

NOW YOU'VE DONE YOUR GOOD DEED FOR THE DAY, WHERE NEXT?

WE'RE GOING TO SYLVANIAR. I'M CURIOUS TO KNOW WHERE THE MISSING FARMERS WENT... AREN'T YOU?

"The film must have been unique in its way because it is the one performance people stop me in the street about," recalled the late Victor Maddern, who played the mentally unstable Robson in Fury from the Deep. "I have been caught unaware on many occasions because people remember more about the grizzly bits than I do."

One of the grizzliest, and most memorable, images from the story occurred at the end of Episode 3. Driven by the mind-controlling seaweed, Maggie Harris wades through the waves, the Margate coast doubling for the North Sea. "It was freezing," remembered director Hugh David sympathetically. "But if you say you've got to, you do find this strange ability to cope for a while. We put some foam on the surface and told her to walk into it and go under, but it wasn't as simple as that. The tide was out and the sea was very shallow and she went on and on. She could have walked half a mile and the sea would only have reached her knees. It was unbelievable.

"So I had to shout to her to walk on her knees, then go down on her hands and knees, and then duck her head under. She could have walked half way across to France. Anyway, we had towels and a hot bath, a drink, whatever she wanted, laid on up at the hotel. We got her back there in about three-and-a-half minutes by helicopter!"

Episode 3 of Fury from the Deep is also notable for depicting the beginning of Victoria's discomfort as a TARDIS passenger. Her comments in this, and the remaining episodes, clearly served to prepare the audience for her departure at the end of Episode 6. "It's very difficult to write companions out," states Victor Pemberton, "especially if they make up their mind to leave after you've scripted the thing, as Debbie did, because you then have to restructure the whole wretched thing. She said she didn't want to get typecast. I set it all up over two episodes. The scripts had already been written when she decided, quite suddenly, to leave, so I had to go back over the whole serial."

The Fury from the Deep telesnaps continue in Issue 209 of Doctor Who Magazine – on sale 20th January.

The din of an ominous alien heartbeat is the eerie backdrop to van Lutyens' sombre warnings. "Down there," he indicates, "in the darkness . . . waiting."
In the Harris' living quarters, the Doctor warns Jamie not to touch the seaweed. The Doctor recommends that Harris puts his wife under medical supervision, and while he leaves to arrange it the TARDIS crew reflect on their new-found freedom. They leave the sleeping Maggie, failing to notice the weed-growth consuming her hand.

Robson claims the heartbeat is merely the sound of a fault at the base of the impeller, and demands that the pump is operational in half-an-hour. In the TARDIS, the Doctor has submerged a sample of the weed in a tank. He is experimenting with cylinders of natural gas and [illegible] tests, which indicate that the weed is emitting a toxic gas. Jamie interrupts with the alarming observation of "little wriggly things" in the weed. The Doctor deduces this is in fact molecular movement. "This," says Victoria, "means that the weed is just as much alive as you and me." At the refinery, Harris appears unconcerned at van Lutyens' reserv[illegible] [illegible] ious that Harris left the Doctor, Jamie and Victoria unattended. He reminds Harris that they are prisoners – and probably saboteurs.

The intercom informs Robson that the impeller is once more moving. Robson feels vindicated: "I told you it was just a mechanical fault didn't I?" It soon, however, grinds to a halt again. The Chief Engineer protests that the fault must be at the base. Robson rounds on van Lutyens furiously. The Dutchman simply repeats that the gas flow should have been turned off. Robson's mood verges on paranoia and, after a further outburst, he retires to his quarters. Harris is anxious to return to his sick wife, but van Lutyens implores him to stay: "Robson is cracking up – you're the only man with authority to take over."

In the TARDIS the Doctor shows Jamie and Victoria an illustration of what he believes is the weed creature. Victoria confirms it is the same as the creature which attacked her at the compound. The sample weed in the tank has already increased in size, and it begins to emit toxic gas. The weed becomes agitated, so Jamie and the Doctor attempt to jam the lid on the tank. They observe the weed shrink under the glass and the Doctor deduces that the weed is feeding off the natural gas beneath the North Sea and giving off toxic emissions. They hurried back to Harris' quarters. Robson accuses van Lutyens and Harris of undermining his authority. He accuses them, and the Chief Engineer, of a conspiracy against him. "I'm in charge here!" he screams before storming out. Van Lutyens decides to contact his superiors in the Hague – Robson is clearly unfit for command. Back in his quarters, Robson tries to relax on his bed.

In the corridor Mr Oak locks the door to Robson's quarters. Robson asks who's there, and calls out that he is not to be disturbed. The silent saboteur operates the emergency vent control. Robson chokes, and, looking up, notices that weed-impregnated foam is swarming through the ventilator grille.

Robson's frenzied screams alert Harris, who finds his boss distraught after the seaweed's attack. The Doctor thanks Victoria for helping him through the window of the Harris' locked flat. They soon notice the smell of toxic gas and the Doctor sends Jamie to investigate the kitchen. In the bedroom, the Doctor and Victoria witness a huge weed- and foam-creature seething across the floor. Victoria screams hysterically and before their eyes, the creature recedes. In the kitchen Jamie is marooned on a table amidst the swarming weed and its foam.

JMN 7

In the hallway, the Doctor pulls down some long curtains and, with Victoria's help, knots them together into a makeshift rope. They throw the lifeline to Jamie who ties it round a table-leg. They drag the semi-conscious Scotsman across the room and carry him back to the compound. Harris tells van Lutyens about the seaweed in Robson's quarters. Van Lutyens hypothesises that the creature must have retreated back down the ventilator shaft having achieved its purpose. Harris [illegible] unstable condition and recommends that all emergency ventilators are in future kept shut.
The Doctor and Victoria look after the partly recovered Jamie. Victoria seems upset and asks the Doctor why they always seem to end up in trouble. "I don't really like being scared out of my wits every second . . . I just wish that once, oh never mind." She seems to decide against saying any more and they head for the communications room. There Harris has just informed Megan Jones (the director of Euro Sea Gas) that he has assumed command. The Doctor arrives and tells Harris he believes seaweed is responsible for their difficulties. Nearby, Quill and his fellow saboteur Oak overhear their conversation. The Doctor goes on to explain that the parasitic seaweed can protect itself by giv[illegible] [illegible] taken to the Medicare centre – she clearly wasn't in her quarters.

Maggie is on the beach with Controller Robson – they are both infected by the parasitic seaweed. "You know what you must do," she tells him. "You will obey." She unflinchingly wades through the water. Resolutely marching into the sea, the waves swallow her . . .

Great new all-colour story next week!

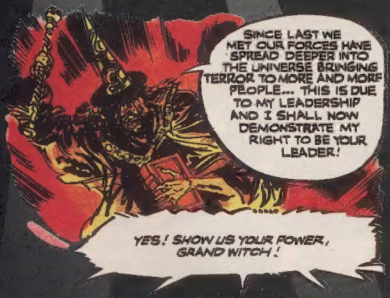
THE WITCHES!

TV Comic
Issues 837 - 841
(30.12.67 - 27.1.68)
Pages: 8 & 9 (Colour)
Writer: Unknown
Artist: John Canning



On the planet Vargo the Doctor and his companions come across a gathering of witches from throughout the universe. Using a variety of gadgets from his utility belt, the Doctor is able to scare off most of the witches by convincing them that he is the powerful Wizard Omega. However, the Grand Witch sees through the Doctor's ruse and schemes to take her revenge on him.

CYBER-MOLE

TV Comic
Issues 842 - 845
(3.2.68 - 24.2.68)
Pages: 8 & 9 (Colour)
Writer: Unknown
Artist: John Canning

In 1970, the Cybermen land a giant cyber-mole vehicle just outside London. Using the mole, they burrow deep into the Earth below the capital and steel the deadly doomsday bomb from its vault. With the bomb in their possession, the Cybermen hold the world to ransom.

The Doctor's knowledge and experience are welcomed by the helpless military and armed with anti-Cyberman weapons, the Doctor leads an assault on the cyber-mole.

Almost every technological device and gadget in the TV Comic Doctor Who strips has its name written on its surface somewhere. In keeping with this, the bomb in Cyber-Mole has the cheerful legend, "Doomsday" stencilled on its side.

THE SABRE TOOTHED GORILLAS!

TV Comic
Issues 846 - 849
(2.3.68 - 23.3.68)
Pages: 8 & 9 (Colour)
Writer: Unknown
Artist: John Canning

The Doctor, John and Gillian land on a beautiful planet but are soon menaced by savage, sabre tooth gorillas. Escaping from the beasts the Doctor and his companions meet a professor who has developed Squidge, a fantastic new substance.

Attacked once again by the gorillas, the Doctor has only the elastic properties of Squidge to help them all escape.

The Sabre Toothed Gorillas!* is probably one of the most unintentionally hilarious of all the Doctor's comic strip adventures.

The professor encountered by the Doctor and his companions has spent ten years working on Squidge which he claims "bounces ten times as high as rubber and you can do anything with it!"

The professor proudly displays his Squidge creations which consist of firstly an exceedingly good Squidge trampoline and secondly a set of Squidge gorilla bats with which he beats the poor creatures senseless – no wonder they are angry!

THE CYBER EMPIRE!

TV Comic
Issues 850 - 853
(30.3.68 - 20.4.68)
Pages: 8 & 9 (Colour)
Writer: Roger Noel Cook
Artist: John Canning

Landing on a planet, the Doctor, John and Gillian discover the Cybermen are using a slave work force of Earthmen to construct a giant city in honour of their Controller.

Disguising himself as a slave, the Doctor hatches a plan to free the oppressed work force.

The rank of the Cyber-Controller is denoted by the fact that he wears a rather fetching cape.

Once again, the Doctor makes good use of his trusty utility belt.

THE DYRONS

TV Comic
Issues 854 - 858
(27.4.68 - 25.5.68)
Pages: 8 & 9 (Colour)
Writer: Roger Noel Cook

On a volcanic planet, the Doctor and his travelling companions encounter a group of shipwrecked school children who are being menaced by a race of hideous land squids called Dyrons.

The Doctor attempts to make use of the planet's natural instability to eliminate the threat of the carnivorous Dyrons.

The Dyrons are described as "the most hideous creatures in the Universe."

Such is the might of the Dyrons that, in this adventure, the Doctor's utility belt is insufficient to deal with the menace alone and it becomes necessary for the Doctor to make use of his ray gun.

RETURN OF THE WITCHES

TV Comic Holiday Special (1968)
Pages: 6 & 7 (B&W)
Writer: Unknown
Artist: Patrick Williams

MASQUERADE

TV Comic Holiday Special (1968)
Pages: 38 & 39 (B&W)
Writer: Unknown
Artist: Patrick Williams

John and Gillian are captured by Cybermen and imprisoned in a cyber outpost. In an attempt to infiltrate the outpost and rescue the children, the Doctor disguises himself as a Cyberman.

The plot of this short adventure is almost identical to the earlier adventure, The Doctor Strikes Back in Issues 792 to 795 of TV Comic. In the earlier story, the Doctor disguised himself as a Dalek to infiltrate a Dalek garrison.

DR. WHO AND THE SPACE PIRATES!

TV Comic
Issues 859 - 863

(1.6.68 - 29.6.68)
Pages: 8 & 9 (Colour)
Writer: Roger Noel Cook (Unconfirmed)
Artist: John Canning

The Doctor offers his services to Zarcus, leader of the peace loving planet of Neon. Ships carrying Neon's food supplies from it's neighbouring planet, Barren are being attacked and boarded by space pirates.

The Doctor offers to take a ship and to collect the food from Barren. However, on the return journey, the Doctor and his companions are attacked and captured by the pirates and are sentenced to walk the plank.

Despite the futuristic space setting, Captain Burglass and his fellow pirates are cast very much in the image of pirates as described in classic adventure stories such as Treasure Island. Captain Burglass wears an eye-patch and a hat with a skull and cross-bones on it. The interior of his cabin is exactly what one would expect in a period sailing ship and of course the Doctor and his companions are sentenced to the classic fate of all captured by pirates – the plank!

Perhaps as a nod in the direction of all things hip and trendy, John refers to the Doctor as "Doc" in this story.

The message of this story is very much one of peace, and ironically it is the Doctor that learns this lesson rather than preaching it. Zarcus of Neon had insisted that the Doctor could make no use of weaponry in his confrontation with the pirates and at the successful conclusion of the tale the Doctor thanks him: "You've done a lot for us, Zarcus! We achieved our mission without the use of violence. If all people were as peaceful as yours the Universe would be a happier place!"

CAR OF THE CENTURY!

TV Comic
Issues 864 - 867
(6.7.68 - 27.7.68)
Pages: 8 & 9 (Colour)
Writer: Roger Noel Cook
Artist: John Canning

In 1989 on the planet Velon, the Doctor designs a revolutionary new car that is indestructible. The car is soon stolen, however, by an evil criminal who uses it to commit a smash-and-grab robbery on a truck transporting gold bullion.

It is up to the Doctor to prevent the unscrupulous villain from using his invention to commit more crimes.

To make his car indestructible, the Doctor uses the formula of the material from which the TARDIS is constructed.

THE JOKERS!

TV Comic
Issues 868 - 871
(3.8.68 - 24.8.68)
Pages: 8 & 9 (Colour)
Writer: Roger Noel Cook
Artist: John Canning

Landing on the planet Comedy, the Doctor, John and Gillian are set upon by the alien Jokers who terrorise the travellers for their own amusement.

To defeat his latest foes, the Doctor employs a small tin of snuff. On the snuff box lid is the legend, 'Doctor Who, Snuff – Extra Strong'!

As a matter of course, synopsis for the Doctor Who strip stories were submitted to the Doctor Who production office at the BBC. For The Jokers, strip writer, Roger Noel Cook also provided an alternate ending to the tale in which the Jokers were killed by a hurtling truck. In reply, script editor of the time, Terrance Dicks gave his approval for the story but felt it was "essential" that the original ending (as published) should be used.
